

Spring is here, and with it, rebirth and renewal. For that reason, much of the following column includes word of new arrivals and rekindling friendships made on the Hanover plain. Lauren Beiley missed our 15th because she was busy giving birth to twins. Michael and Samantha were born on June 6th of last year to go along with a 2 year old, Jessica. She works at home as a full-time mom on the Upper West Side of Manhattan, but she and husband, David, are looking to move back to Miami. She's sees Elizabeth Maringer in the neighborhood quite often.

Staying on twin patrol, Mike Kanarick and his wife, Liz now have twenty tiny toes to tickle! Neil and Rae arrived on Dec. 22nd at 34 weeks. The Kanaricks live in Birmingham, AL where Liz is a visiting law professor at Samford University's Cumberland School of Law. Mike's full-time political job is executive director of the Alabama Democratic Party (yes, there are some Dems in Alabama). For parenting advice, he turns to Peter Goldstein in San Francisco.

Jonathan Sullivan. Jonathan lives outside Washington, DC, with his wife Cindy (Duke '90), son Timothy (2) and dog Yuki. Jonathan and Cindy are expecting a daughter just about the time you're reading this. Jonathan is a Senior (IT) Analyst at Fannie Mae where he is working on next generation mortgage processing software, and he's now President of the Dartmouth Club of Washington, DC. Fellow classmate Bill Wilson also works at Fannie Mae. Jonathan writes, "I have been very fortunate to have some of my closest friends from Dartmouth here in DC: Hunter Labovitz, Brad Lang, Ramzi Nemo, and Derek Symer.

Bill Fearon and his wife, Yvonne, live in San Francisco and now have two girls, Katie (3) and Nina (1). Both are on the faculty at Stanford (Bill and Yvonne, not the girls); Yvonne is a reconstructive plastic surgeon and Bill is an interventional cardiologist. The Fearons often find themselves hanging out with other Bay Area classmates with small kids, like Bill Gaylord, Brian Bohlig, Todd Tracey, Jake Reynolds, Tim McAdam, and Mike Seifer.

Rob Crawford is Director of Development at The Park School (N-9) in Brookline, MA, where his oldest son, Robert, attends kindergarten. Benjamin (3) and Elizabeth (1) are right behind him. His wife, Meg, is a pediatrician in Framingham, MA. As it turns out Rob's early musical stylings with "Second Hand Jam" and the "Aires" were harbingers of things to come. Last fall, he co-wrote and recorded a song about the Red Sox under the alias "Crawdaddy And The Cursebusters," entitled, "Tell 'Em We're Comin' And Hell's Comin' With Us," and it was played over the loudspeakers at Fenway Park prior to home playoff games. If you'd like a copy of the CD single, send me an email at RobertLCrawford@yahoo.com.

Finally, Rob, Bill Levin, Matt Schmitz, Cheryl Shepard, Matt Greene and I were in attendance for the 10th Anniversary celebration of the Dartmouth Partners in Community Service. In short, DPCS is a partnership between alumni and the Tucker Foundation aimed at matching Dartmouth undergrads with Community Service Organizations around the country. It is also our class project and a worthy one at that. Look to our website: www.dartmouth90.org and this column for more news on DPCS. That's all from West Hartford, CT. May your sunsets be long and romantic and your driver long and straight this summer.
